FURNITURE

Additional INFORMATION

1. FURNITURE GENERAL INFORMATION

Rivièra Maison furniture is made from a variety of reclaimed timbers. This keeps logging to the minimum. Any new timbers we use are sourced from sustainable plantations.

All Table tops of Dining, End, Side, Bar, Coffee Tables are provided with a Matt Polish as the final finish of the tops. The Matt Polish gives some protection and nourishes the wood of the tops. This Matt Polish should be maintained 4-6 times a year with our RM Wood Care Matt Surface to keep all mentioned above in a good shape. Always follow the description and manual of the RM Wood Care Matt Surface.

Each tabletop is one of a kind due to the use of recycled / Old wood. This is why each piece of furniture has a unique appearance, look and feel. Advise the customer to use coasters and placemats on table tops. Most tables and cabinets are equipped with adjustable sliders to position the furniture properly.

2. MATERIALS & MAINTENANCE ADVICE

Acacia wood
The Acacia tree, also known as the Mimosa tree, is a fast-growing and hardy tree. This wood has the same properties as teak wood. During acclimatization, small hairline cracks can emerge. This type of wood is also used to manufacture outdoor furniture items.
Maintenance: Damp cloth.

Alder wood
Alder wood is used in furniture manufacturing, and the wood chips of this North-American timber are used to smoke salmon. This timber is extremely stable and is therefore mainly used in the manufacture of side cabinets and cupboards.
Maintenance: Damp cloth.

Aluminum
All aluminum parts and furniture items are made from recycled aluminum sourced from aircrafts, cars, cans of food and a range of other everyday objects. Aluminum can be reprocessed and reformed endlessly.
Maintenance: Dry cloth.

Aniline leather
Aniline leather is luxuriously soft to the touch and Riviera Maison provides two stunning matt colours to choose from. Cowhide comes from full-grown cows from Argentina. The leather is first tanned, giving it an unlimited life and then fully dyed. After this it will be cut, stitched and decorated. Irregularities can occur in the leather since it is a 100% natural product. Due to the softness of these leathers, they are more susceptible to wear, so are better for homes without children or pets who are likely to damage it. The leather will get a more aged and vintage look-and-feel after using.
Maintenance: To keep your leather looking its best we recommend quickly blotting up any spills or stains with a mildly damp cloth. The leather benefits from a treatment every 6/12 months with our Leather care kit.

Ash wood
Ash is a hard, heavy, ring porous hardwood and belongs to the Olive family. It has a prominent grain that resembles oak, and a white to light brown colour. When finished with natural varnish the texture of the grains will be more visible.
Maintenance: Damp cloth.

Beech wood
This European specie has mostly a pale cream colour and has very fine grains. This wood is mainly used in frames, a variety of bent and turned parts in Club chairs and Sofa's.
Maintenance: No, as it is used for inside furniture.

Cotton
Cotton is a natural fiber that originates from the cotton plant and is the most commonly used fiber. This material is strong and long-wearing, and is not subject to pilling of dust. Colour variations are nearly invisible.
Maintenance: Dry clean.

Glass
Single-paned glass is used in cabinets, and is also referred to as 'float' glass because of the continuous nature of the production process. Float glass is produced by melting the raw materials sand, lime and sodium carbonate at high temperatures. For tempererd glass see next page.
Maintenance: Mild soapy water.

Linen
This fabric is made from flax, which is obtained from plant fibers which undergo a special treatment process. The flax is first bleached before It is mixed with other threads. The use of natural materials will result in a visible colour nuance, and less wrinkling of the fabric. Linen fabrics may be subject to dust pills.
Maintenance: Dry clean.

Mahogany
This extremely durable and hardy wood type has an even reddish-brown colour. This is used in the frames of rattan chairs.
Maintenance: Dry cloth.

Mango wood
This hardwood is extracted from the mango fruit tree in plantations in India. Once the tree stops producing fruit, it is cut down and the wood is incorporated in furniture as table tops. The application of a translucent finish brings out the fine qualities of the wood structure and colours.
Maintenance: Damp cloth.

Oak wood
The White Oak variant is extremely strong and is used in the manufacture of table tops and cupboard doors. It is light in colour and has a striking grain.
Maintenance: Dry cloth.

Old elm
This North-American wood has been used for dozens of years in the manufacture of (front) doors. The untreated wood of these doors is recycled without adding a new finish. This preserves the original quality of the timber.
Maintenance: Dry brush/damp cloth.

Old Fir
This 40- to 50-year old wood has been used as beams in houses and barns in China. The wood is very durable. This reclaimed timber has a 'lived' appearance. Small hairline cracks and yellow spots can occur from the resin.
Maintenance: Damp cloth.

Pellini
The natural leather is first tanned, and then a special coating is applied to the lowest layer of leather. The coating strengthens and protects the leather, and is then dyed the desired colour.
Maintenance: Pellini cleaner; do not damp clean.

Poplar wood
This North-American hardwood is ideal for making furniture. It is used mainly in the manufacture of bases of tables and cupboard frames.
Maintenance: Damp cloth.

(Rustic) Rattan
Rattan also known as slimit or rotan, is a 100% natural material. It grows as lianas or climbing vines along colossal tree trunks in the jungles of Borneo, Indonesia. During the monsoon season (from June to October), the stems are harvested at 5 to 6 meters in length. The rattan is first placed for a few weeks in mud baths until it turns into a beautiful greyish-brown colour. Its stems are dried in the sun for a while and then sorted by colour and thickness. The stems are then woven by hand into the finished product. Suitable for interior use.
Maintenance: Dry brush.

Rattan peel
This is made from the skin of Rattan (see above).

Rattan slimit
A very fine and thin Rattan species (see above).

Reclaimed teak
This 60- to 100-year old wood is made of a mixture of reclaimed wood from window frames, doors, ceilings and floors of old houses and barns found on the island of Java, Indonesia. This wood type is extremely durable and hardwearing, on the one hand because it contains natural oils and on the other hand because of its extremely fine wood structure. This wood type is brown in colour. Because this wood has been used for decades, the wood is extremely stable and easy to use in furniture, even in wider parts.
Maintenance: Damp cloth.

Reclaimed hardwood
This hardwood is ideal for making furniture. It is used mainly in the manufacture of bases of tables and cupboard frames. Because this is reclaimed wood, it has a 'lived-in' look.
Maintenance: Damp cloth.

Rubber wood
As soon as latex production stops, the timber is processed. This type of wood is extremely stable and therefore lends itself perfectly for the manufacture of chair, armchair and sofa supports. Rubber wood is light brown in colour and has characteristic markings. This is accentuated by the French Grey finish.
Maintenance: Dry cloth.

Teak wood
This wood type is extremely durable and hardwearing, on the one hand because it contains natural oils and on the other hand because of its extremely fine wood structure. The wood is extremely stable and easy to incorporate in outdoor furniture, include in wider parts. Teak wood is brown in colour and after a while due to the weather (sunlight and rain) this will turn platinum grey.
Maintenance: Water and soft brush (never use a high pressure cleaning).

Tempered Glass
Toughened glass, also known as tempered or safety glass, is used in tables and other furniture. The glass obtains these properties after being heated until the glass becomes liquid, after which it is immediately rapidly cooled ('supercooling'). When tempered glass breaks, it does not produce the large glass shards like normal glass, but instead, it falls apart into small granular chunks that cannot cause injuries as easily.
Maintenance: Mild soapy water.

Velvet
Characteristic for velvet is the colour change when the fabric is stroked and lived on, or put in different light sources. This creates a beautiful colour dynamic and gives velvet that luxurious look that makes it so popular. Each seat may appear to have a different colour nuance due to the light.
Maintenance: Carefully remove stains by hand.

Washed cotton
After the cotton fibers have been woven, they are washed. This process gives the fabric a rugged, vintage look. A slight variation in colour can occur as a result of this process. Because it is a strong, long-wearing fabric, cotton retains its properties and will not pill.
Maintenance: Dry clean.

Washed linen
Washing the linen first results in a rugged, vintage look. Colour variations will definitely occur during this process, which means that every roll of fabric is unique. The linen fabric can pill over time.
Maintenance: Dry clean.

3. FABRICS GENERAL INFORMATION
Do not scrubs or rub stains! First dab the stain with a dry cloth. Then use a wet cloth, dry scrub or brush. Please advise the customer to use RM Textile Care for extra protection of textile fabrics. Always follow the description and manual of the RM Textile Care. For upholstered furniture with a loose cover use DRY CLEAN ONLY!

Velvet has many nuances of the same colour. The fabric changes when it is stroked or put in different light settings. It is completely normal for furniture in a velvet fabric to appear to have different shades. This makes the fabric special and gives it a luxurious look.

The fabric of upholstered furniture can discolour due to direct or indirect sunlight. Even when different pieces of furniture are manifcatured from the same fabric and colour, (in time) colour differences may occur.

4. MARTINDALE TEST 2022
The Martindale test is based on the abrasion of a textile fabric against a coarser fabric and the classes below are used to indicate this.

Decorative use (6,000 Martindale)
Fabrics in the use class "Decorative use" have a low abrasion resistance and are only suitable for use on seating furniture that has only a decorative function. For example, a decorative piece of furniture in the hall or bedroom, on which rarely anyone sits.

Light residential use (up to 15,000 Martindale)
Upholstery fabrics in the use class "Light domestic use" are suitable for furniture that is used with care, and not on a daily basis.

Normal residential use (up to 40,000 Martindale)
Upholstery fabrics in the use class "Normal domestic use" can withstand daily use for several hours in an average family situation. However, it should be borne in mind that in themselves not unusual habits and situations can lead to more than normal load on the upholstery fabric. For example, a seat in front of the TV that is used daily for many hours.

Intensive domestic use (up to 75,000 Martindale)
The use class "Intensive domestic use" indicates that this is a strong upholstery fabric that can withstand several hours of intensive daily use, for example in a busy family. This usage class is also recommended when there is a fixed seat in front of the TV that is used for many hours every day.

Intensive domestic use + commercial (>75,000 Martindale)
The upholstery fabrics in the use class "Intensive domestic use + commercial" are extra strong. The term commercial indicates that these fabrics are also suitable for use in work situations. Similar use can also occur in the living situation, for example a computer workstation at home. Upholstery fabrics in this use class can be used intensively on a daily basis.

5. LIGHTFASTNESS
What is lightfastness? Upholstery fabrics are always assigned a so-called lightfastness score. This score indicates to what extent upholstery fabric is resistant to discoloration under the influence of sunlight, daylight and artificial light, depending on the dyes used and special treatments. It is technically not possible to manufacture fabrics that do not discolour at all under the influence of light, certainly not when a fabric is regularly exposed to direct sunlight for many hours. The discolouration is more visible in dark colours than in lighter colours.

To determine the degree of lightfastness, an international rating scale from 1 – 8 is used. Concretely, an increase of one point on that scale means that the lightfastness has doubled. It will then take twice as long for the fabric to fade.

The rating scale explained:
Lightfastness 1 = poor
Lightfastness 2-3 = fair
Lightfastness 4-5 = good
Lightfastness 6-7 = very good
Lightfastness 8 = excellent

Poor
Upholstery fabrics with a lightfastness class "poor" are not very resistant to daylight and artificial light. Discolouration will occur very quickly, so it is not recommended to expose this furniture to direct sunlight.

Fair
Upholstery fabrics with a lightfastness class "fair" are reasonably resistant to daylight and artificial light. It is not recommended to expose this furniture to direct sunlight.

Good
Upholstery fabrics with a lightfastness class "good" have good resistance to artificial light and daylight and are reasonably resistant to sunlight. Prolonged exposure to sunlight may cause discolouration.

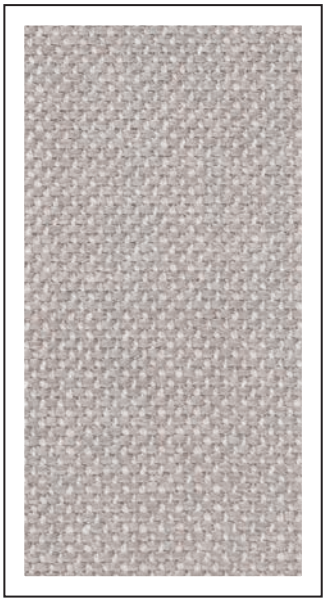

Very good
Upholstery fabrics with a lightfastness class "very good" are very resistant to artificial light and daylight and fairly resistant to sunlight. After prolonged exposure to sunlight, a slight discolouration may occur eventually.

Excellent
Upholstery fabrics with a lightfastness in the class "excellent" are extremely resistant to artificial light and daylight and very resistant to sunlight. When exposed to sunlight for a long time, a very slight discolouration, which is almost invisible to the eye, can occur after a long period of time.

"Fabrics that do not discolour do not exist"
